Despoil'd
Of all our good, sham'd, naked, miserable.
What hurt can there be in all the flanders and disgraces of this world, if they are but the arts and methods of providence to shame us into the glories of the next. South.
Were there but one righteous man in the world, he would hold up his head with confidence and honour; he would shame
the world, and not the world him. South.
He in a loathsome dungeon doom'd to lie,
In bonds retain'd his birthright liberty,
And sham'd oppression, till it set him free. Dryden.
The coward bore the man immortal spite,
Who sham'd him out of madness into flight. Dryden.
Who shames a scribbler, breaks a cobweb through;
He spins the slight self-pleasing thread a-new. Pope.
2. To disgrace.
Certes, sir knight, ye been too much to blame,
Thus for to blot the honour of the dead,
And with foul cowardice his carcass shame. Fairy Queen.
So bent, the more shall shame him his repulse. Milton.
To SHAME. v. n. To be ashamed.
Great shame it is, thing to divine in view,
Made for to be the world's most ornament,
To make the bait her gazers to embrew;
Good shames to be to ill an instrument. Spenser.
Sham'd thou not, knowing whence thou art exalted,
To let thy tongue detect thy base-born heart? Shakespeare.
To the trunk of it authors give such a magnitude, as shame
to repeat. Raleigh's History of the World.
Auster spy'd him,
Cruel Auster thither hy'd him;
And with the ruff of one rude blast,
Sham'd not spitefully to waste
All his leaves, so fresh, so sweet,
And lay them trembling at his feet. Crahan.
SHAMEFACED. adj. [shame and face.] Modest; bashful;
easily put out of countenance.
Philoclea, who blushing and withal smiling, making shame-facedness pleasing, and pleasure shamefaced, tenderly moved her feet, unwonted to feel the naked ground. Sidney.
Conscience is a blushing shamefaced spirit, that mutinies in a man's bosom: it fills one full of obstacles. Shak. R. III.
A man may be shamefaced, and a woman modest, to the degree of scandalous. L'Estrange.
Your shamefaced virtue shrunk'd the people's praise,
And senate's honours. Dryden.
From this time we may date that remarkable turn in the behaviour of our fashionable Englishmen, that makes them shamefaced in the exercise of those duties which they were sent into the world to perform. Addison's Freeholder.
SHAMEFACEDLY. adv. [from shamefaced.] Modestly; bashfully.
SHAMEFACEDNESS. n. f. [from shamefaced.] Modesty; bashfulness; timidity.
Dorus, when he had sung this, having had all the while a free beholding of the fair Pamela, could well have spared such horror, and defended the assault he gave unto her face with bringing a fair stain of shamefacedness into it. Sidney.
Why wonder ye,
Fair sir, at that which ye so much embrace?
She is the fountain of your modesty;
You shamefaced are, but shamefastness itself is she. Fa. Qu.
None but fools, out of shamefacedness, hide their ulcers, which, if shown, might be healed. Dryden's Dufresnoy.
SHAMEFUL. adj. [shame and full.] Disgraceful; ignominious;
infamous; reproachful.

1. The middle joint of the leg; that part which reaches from the ankle to the knee.
Etfoons her white strait legs were altered
To crooked crawling shanks, of marrow emptied;
And her fair face to foul and loathsome hue,
And her fine corps to a bag of venom grew. Spenser.
The sixth age shifts
Into the lean and slipper'd pantaloons,
With spectacles on nose, and pouch on side;
His youthful hose, well sav'd, a world too wide
For his shrunk shanks. Shak. As you like it.
A flag says, if these pitiful shanks of mine were but answerable to this branching head, I can't but think how I should defy all my enemies. L'Estrange.

To set a form upon that indigelt,
Which he hath left to shapeless and so rude. Shakespeare.
He is deformed, crooked, old and fere;
Ill-fac'd, worse-bodied, shapeless ev'ry where. Shakespeare.
What fools were here,
Disguis'd like Mucovites in shapeless gear? Shakespeare.
Thrice had I lov'd thee,
Before I knew thy face or name;
So in a voice, to in a shapeless flame,
Angels affect us oft, and worshipping be. Donne.
Now the victor stretch'd his eager hand,
Where the tall nothing stood, or seem'd to stand;
A shapeless shade, it melted from his sight,
Like forms in clouds, or visions of the night! Pope.
Some objects please our eyes,
Which out of nature's common order rise,
The shapeless rock, or hanging precipice. Pope.
SHAPESMITH. n. f. [shape and smith.] One who undertakes
